Why not start living on your own in Japan?

The National Institute of Technology, Oita College has their own dormitory, called Akeno-ryo, and is available to any student who applies for boarding. Supervising faculty are assigned to and manage each dorm, and students are provided three full meals every day. The cafeteria staff have nutritionist qualifications, and are able to cater when necessary and upon request to any dietary restrictions. A separate kitchen for exchange students is also available, specifically for storing and cooking Halal food.

The Akeno-ryo dormitory is located right across the street from the college and access is quick and easy from campus. Dorm 1 is specifically for female students and the others (2-5) are for male students, based on their grade. Rooms are usually shared with another student, and some senior students (usually 5th grade and above) are able to stay in individual rooms if available. All rooms have an air conditioner as well as multiple washing machines and driers on each floor for free use (laundry supplies such as detergent and fabric softener are not provided).

If at any time during your stay at the dorm there is an issue of concern, please feel free to speak to the dormitory office staff that are available 24/7. Monthly accommodation fees include meals and utilities in one lump sum. Any new student at the college is usually granted a room when requested, but in the case of low vacancy, priority will be given to those who's home residence is further from the college.

How to Apply for Accommodation

Any first-year student who applies will normally be allocated accommodation in the dormitory. For further information, please contact the Accommodation Office by phone, fax or email.
